Graduate School of Sustainable Systems Science

The Graduate School of Sustainable Systems Science seeks applicants with the following qualities:

- Those who have acquired basic knowledge and skills in the departments of Production Systems Science, Health Care Systems Science, and Glocal Culture of the master's program of the university or equivalent higher education institutions, and who have completed practical training in the specialized fields of their respective departments.
- Applicants should have high aspirations for the sustainability of the region and the world, and who have a strong interest and desire to work with the field to create ideas that can be applied beyond the framework of existing academia in order to realize a sustainable society. Those who have an interest in other fields and a willingness to discover issues related to the sustainability of humanity as a whole and the immediate sphere of life, and to show the way to solutions.
- In deepening their individual expertise, they must be able to communicate with domestic and international researchers with resonance and cooperation, face challenges with an ethical view that respects the dignity of life and humanity, and have a strong will to solve problems.

Division of Production System Science

The objective of this major is to nurture graduates who can contribute to local industries by utilizing their advanced expertise in engineering and by realizing sustainable production processes in the field of manufacturing. We seek applicants with the following abilities and qualities:

- Fundamental knowledge of mechanical engineering and the various fields of mechanics within its framework.
- A person who is willing to build DX and GX systems utilizing information engineering, electrical and electronic engineering to realize sustainable production processes.
- A person who is not limited to his or her own specialty, but has the drive and energy to actively collaborate with experts in other fields to create pathways to solving issues for sustainability.
- Those who are willing to actively engage with local industry and play a leadership role in the development of local industry.

Division of Health Sciences

The objective of this major is to nurture individuals who can contribute to the creation of sustainable communities through the systematic establishment of community-based healthcare and the development of medical devices. We seek applicants with the following abilities and qualities:

- Applicants must have a master's degree (Health Sciences) awarded by the University's Department of Health Care Systems Science, or have academic ability equivalent to such a degree.
- Ability to create and execute new ideas, cooperate with others, and take initiative to systematically build sustainable healthcare.

- Desire to contribute to people's health and well-being and have a clear vision of their future career path as an advanced healthcare professional, researcher, or educator.

Division of Glocal Cultures

The objective of this major is to nurture individuals who can work to resolve international and regional issues, to propose visionary and comprehensive paths in order to achieve a sustainable society from a humanities and social science perspective. We seek applicants with the following abilities and qualities:

- Obtained a master's degree from an accredited institution of higher education and have knowledge of the fundamentals of a specialized field.
- Ability to use creativity and historical understanding to deepen their expertise in language and culture studies, political economy, and tourism studies, and propose visionary and comprehensive paths that are not bound by the existing frameworks within academia.
- Have the abilities and skills necessary to identify and resolve issues related to the sustainability of Minami-Kaga (the southern area of Ishikawa Prefecture), the Hokuriku region, and globally.
- Those who are equipped with the abilities and skills necessary to identify and solve various sustainability issues in Minami-Kaga and Hokuriku and the international community, who are proud of their own culture, who have developed the ability to explore the cultural diversity of their local communities, and who wish to play a leadership role in solving local problems.

14. Long-term enrollment system

The long-term enrollment system allows students who have difficulty in studying due to occupational or other reasons to take a planned educational course of study for a period of time beyond the standard working years. The Graduate School allows students to enroll in the program for a maximum of six years.

If approved at the time of admission, the total amount of tuition paid for the normal term of study (3 years) will be divided equally each semester during the approved extended period of study.

Those who are eligible to apply for the long-term enrollment are those who fall under any of the following conditions and have difficulty in completing their studies within the standard term of study.

- (1) Those who are employed
- (2) Those engaged in housework, childcare, nursing care, etc.
- (3) Persons with physical disabilities, intellectual disabilities, mental disabilities (including developmental disabilities)

If you wish to use the long-term enrollment system, please inform us of your wish in "18. Inquiries" on page 25 of this guidebook during the application period.

15. Prior Contact with Division Directors

Please note that applicants for the following categories must notify the head of the division to which they wish to apply before the application period.

- Applicants with master's degrees
- Employed / professional applicants
- International applicants
